Yet again our health services are at risk. The North Central London NHS (covering Camden, Islington, Haringey, Enfield and Barnet) have re-opened the possibility of closing the Accident and Emergency, Trauma, Paediatrics and Maternity Departments in North London Hospitals. This is part of a wider attack on hospitals and other health and mental health services in North London.

Health Secretary Andrew Lansley gave us reassurances outside our hospitals, before and after the election, that the NCL plans would be scrapped and that our Accident and Emergency provision would be safe. If this fails to be the case, this is the first serious broken promise to come from the Government.
